This 58,000 square foot state-of-the-art nursing care facility, opened in 2004, was designed to provide a safe environment for residents, a group which includes people with multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, cerebral palsy, and spinal cord injury. Despite the heavy involvement of the nursing staff in the residents' daily lives, the building was designed with a deliberately residential feel, incorporating wood, stone, and natural light throughout the building. Two interior courtyards extend the building into the natural environment while keeping residents and staff safe.
